TO: Cultural Empowerment to Further Local Economies of Scale

SECTION I:

Countries can start a nationwide promotion to increase the cultural impact on local business. With an ingrained cultural identity, small underdeveloped countries can even create businesses that leverage on cultural practice. With this, small countries can compete on a global scale.

SECTION II:

This is an opt-in program. Countries will be able to opt in to choose whether or not to promote cultural identity through business in their economy.

SECTION III:

This is not an expensive resolution. The only costs will be within the country to promote culture. This will cost 0.05% of the country's GDP.

SECTION IV:

Countries must be committed to promoting and finding their cultural identity within their economy. Countries that are not able to increase their domestic production and local economies would be penalized.

TO: Small-Country Coalition and Economic Practice Review Board

SECTION I:

Sweden and Croatia aim to combat the economic exploitation of underdeveloped countries by establishing a coalition of said countries to identify powers taking part in exploitative practices based upon a set of general principles of fair commerce developed by the coalition. For powers violating these values, sanctions will be placed upon them by all member countries and larger but supportive non-member countries.

SECTION II:

This coalition is opt-in; however, country admittance will be measured by the Human Development Index. These countries, many of whom have been or currently are exploited, will establish a set of guiding principles specifying qualifications for commerce to be considered exploitative. Based upon these principles, member countries will decide if outside countries are taking part in neocolonial practices. Further, any country, coalition member or not, may submit another power for review. If a country is found to be involved in neocolonialism, all member countries will place economic sanctions on it to deter further unjust economic conduct. Further, countries too large to qualify for this coalition but who still support its principles may also place sanctions on countries found to be exploitative.

Consistent with our opposition to neocolonialism, this federation is committed to respecting the sovereignty of all nations; therefore, we will never intervene with said sovereignty in any country.

SECTION III:

This federation is simply an alliance and review board; therefore, it will not have a cost.

SECTION IV:

Countries must abide by the guidelines of fair commerce which they establish. Any member country is eligible for review by the board if suspected of violating its principles.

TO: International Bachelor to Fund Geoengineering Research

SECTION I:

We propose an International bachelor competition, in which countries could op-in to send in one contestant to compete in the competition. Sending in a contestant would cost a small fee of 10,000$, and the bachelor would be chosen from a new country yearly, via a comprehensive committee. The competition would raise money for geoengineering research, by featuring geoengineering dates and activities. The competition would also foster stronger senses of culture in each country, as sending in a contestant would promote pride, as citizens root for their contestant. The winner would find both love and scientific research prosperity.

TO: International Research and Development of Geoengineering

SECTION I:

China is looking to create an international research network that researches and develops geoengineering.

SECTION II:

This will be an opt-in program that allows for the countries that are a part of the program to be a part of an international research network into the effects, advantages, and implementation of geoengineering. Focus will primarily be on carbon removal technology. Funds will be divided up proportionally based on the size and advancement of the research center in each participating country. There will also be a small tax encouraged on the companies producing high carbon emissions in participating countries that will help fund the research. This tax will be removed if companies help the research network test and implement the new technology. Research done by the participating countries will be privatized to companies that will be connected and funded by this program. The U.N. subcommittee will also oversee the effectiveness of each program to determine if funds are being abused.

SECTION III:

Each opt-in country will contribute a minimum of .01% of their GDP to this network of research centers. Each country is also open to allowing a research center to be build somewhere in their country allowing for testing in diverse areas.

SECTION IV:

There will not be penalizations for not joining the program. Not joining the program will result in not reaping the benefits of the research. Also, abuse of the finances or weaponizing of the technology will result of the immediate removal from the research program and sections deemed appropriate by the U.N. general assembly.

TO: Pigs

SECTION I:

Yemen and Nigeria are in support of furthering the research of geo-engineering. However, our countries do not have enough money to further this research.

SECTION II:

Our plan is to create an opt in coalition including smaller, developing countries with poor financial status for the purpose of researching geo- engineering. Yemen and Nigeria will hold power over this coalition as founding members.

SECTION III:

We will attempt to receive support from large developed nations that could fund our research program. In addition to our coalition of small countries, we will also have an opt in program for countries that are better off financially. In return for funding our research, these countries will be the first to know of the results. This will allow these countries to keep their own countries safe from any debilitating outcomes of geo-engineering.

SECTION IV:

Countries who refuse to pay after joining our coalition will be removed from the coalition.

TO: Use Greenland as a Trash Can

SECTION I:

The world has a problem with waste. China pledges to buy Greenland and allow all countries to deposit their trash in Greenland.

SECTION II:

China will buy Greenland for an estimated price of 1.1 trillion US dollars, and transform it into the world's largest landfill. All countries who wish to deposit their waste, hazardous or nonhazardous, can do so in Greenland. The residents of Greenland will be given immediate Chinese citizenship upon purchase. The name of Greenland will be changed to Trash Can. All of the trash will be burned and the gas will fill a giant balloon which will carry all of Greenland into space.

SECTION III:

This will cost China roughly 1.1 trillion USD, but will be free to all those who participate. Participating countries will, however, be responsible for the transport of their own trash.

TO: Trash to Treasure

SECTION I:

Countries such as Trinidad and Tobago and others in the Caribbean suffer overload of trash disposal due to their small areas and natural disasters. We want to institute programs that recycle commonly used products like water bottles and cardboard to promote the unique culture of these countries. For example, we would create instruments to promote reggae culture or bongos for social enjoyment.

SECTION II:

We propose an opt-in program in which countries can participate in forming creative methods of transforming common recyclable items into culturally significant treasures.

SECTION III:

This resolution would require 0.01% of a country's GDP to finance.

SECTION IV:

No penalties.

TO: Organic Waste Importation for Energy Generation

SECTION I:

As Sweden is deeply concerned about the environmental repercussions of ineffective waste management, we are steadily advancing towards a zero waste society. Our primary strategy for doing so is utilizing waste for the production of energy, with 40% of our food waste currently being used for this purpose. In order to replicate our success on the global scale, we advocate for this process to be more widely adopted.

SECTION II:

Sweden and other countries with capabilities for waste-to-energy conversion will import organic waste from countries unable to properly manage their own waste. We will then convert this waste to energy, simultaneously eliminating waste and providing an alternative energy source. This program is opt-in, both for countries importing waste and countries exporting it.

SECTION III:

As the countries taking part will possess high GDPs, they will personally fund the transportation and conversion of this organic waste. However, they will be reaping the benefits of mass amounts of organic material to be used as an alternative fuel source.

SECTION IV:

As this program is optional, there are no penalties.
