

Langiappe Topic:

Your nation, along with every other nation, has received intel of a special organization, with members across the globe, that has access to cutting edge military weaponry. With this advanced technology, they have established themselves as a threat to the entire world—every country is at stake and may be this group's potential target(s). While there hasn't been any evidence of an attack on any country on the horizon, conspiracies are spreading and people are rioting all over the globe, especially in developed nations.

Recently, recognizance has made attempts to establish a line of communication with this rising organization. However, there is the concern that establishing communications could provoke this organization in some way, so attempts to communicate must be made with caution. In the event of war with this secret society, you may need to prepare resources, rations, military tactics, etc. You might need to increase spending towards your military and protection for your people and other nations. In the event that there is an attack on any nation, your country must decide whether or not to take foreigners in as refugees and how that process would play out or even decide whether or not to step into this conflict. Here are some questions to ask yourself:

How will you help other countries that are under attack by this secret society? Will your country agree to provide care for refugees from an attacked nation if it comes to that? If so, how will your country maximize money and space for these refugees? How will you protect your country if confronted by advanced military weaponry? If your country goes into lockdown in preparation for an attack, how will you ration/distribute supplies? Would you move your citizens into protective fallout shelters? How would you calm the riots in your nation so that your people can listen to your safety protocols?